Tom and Barb Butterfield of Foxton bought their ranch from the Corbins, who were the original homesteaders on the land.

CHSM members interviewed several local residents this summer. The historical society is video-recording the stories of people who have a long history in Conifer, to preserve the lore of “how it used to be.” Here is a small sampling of some of the people and areas:

Foxton: Tom and Barb Butterfield

The Resort Valley Ranch near Foxton is home to Tom and Barb Butterfield. Among the original landowners who homesteaded the area were various Corbin family members. Tom Butterfield grew up on a ranch near Sedalia. His father, a respected Denver surgeon, purchased the land from the various Corbins in the 1940s. Tom began ranching the Letter to the community

by Suzi Morris, CHSM President

Greetings!

It's autumn. If you look carefully, the Aspen trees are just beginning to shimmer with gold. What a summer! The rainfall we received was similar to the climate the pioneers experienced. Now we know how our pioneers could manage to grow enough lettuce, potatoes, and other crops to sell at the market in Denver!

Our popular Summer Lecture Series was held in the Main Lodge at Conifer Community Park at Beaver Ranch. In June, Bob Kuehster shared many memories of his childhood on Kuehster Road. His industrious family grew vegetables and hay, raised rabbits, and operated a sawmill. In July, Yvonne Ludwig shared memories of her early years in a cabin on Pleasant Park Road. Our August program featured Lew Hopkins, who shared his research on Mt. Lugo. The ski hill was one of two built and operated by Lew's father. Mt. Lugo was located where Meyer Ranch Open Space Park is today.

In September, it still felt like summer. We added a bonus program after a surprise phone call from Texas. Carroll Brown was the Director of the Southwest Community Center when the Main Lodge was built at Beaver Ranch. Mr. Brown wanted to donate documents and photos to the Conifer Historical Society and Museum. We were fortunate that Carroll and his wife had plans to come to Denver! The program evolved to include the early history of the property from the 1860s to the 1890s when the George Kennedy family lived on the ranch. George Kennedy's great-granddaughter, Marilee Croft, spoke to us about those early years and copies of family photos and documents were donated to our Historical Society.

These programs were recorded as part of our Oral History program, and the DVDs are available.

land in 1946 upon his return from WWII. He and Barb moved onto the land in 1955.

The ranch did not have electricity until 1962, due to the distance off a main road. Barb showed us the various homestead deeds granted to the Corbin family members. The earliest was signed by President Grant in 1875. Others were signed by Presidents Arthur, Cleveland, Teddy Roosevelt and Wilson!

Shadow Mountain Road: Welch/Wood

Minnie Norton Wood Welch passed on several hundred acres of homesteaded land to her children along what is now Shadow Mountain Drive. Photo provided by Danny Wood.

In the early 1900s the Welch family had cabins along what is now Shadow Mountain Road. People would ride a bus owned by the Welch family from the Brown Palace in Denver to the Shadow Mountain Resort to “rough it” for a day or two in the mountains and others came directly to the area for vacations.

CHSM video-recorded Danny Wood Jr. visiting with locals who now live on what used to be Wood and Welch homesteaded land. Some of the original cabins still remain along Shadow Mountain Road.

Critchell: McCollum Cabin

Mildred McCollum was a single college educated career woman when she purchased 60 acres near Critchell in 1937. Born and raised in rural Kansas, this fiercely independent woman moved to NYC following college and then to Europe in the 1920s and 1930s. She was vacationing in Colorado when she fell in love with the land. She married John Feeley, a writer and poet, when she was in her mid-30s. They lived for a few years in the tiny cabin, sans electricity and plumbing, but then moved back east to New Hampshire.

Mildred’s children spent their childhood summers during the 1950s at the cabin and continue to spend summer vacations here from their current homes around the world.

The descendents of Mildred McCollum Feeley continue to visit their family cabin near Critchell. Mildred purchased the cabin and 60 acres in 1937 when she was a single woman visiting Colorado from New York City.

Conifer: Myrtle Fields Beeler

Myrtle Fields Beeler and her younger sister Betty Fields Long both enjoyed recounting their early days on Sylvan Park Ranch, located off Oehlmann Park Road (today known as the Lorenz Ranch). Myrtle and Betty recounted that their father and oldest brother built the Fields Trading Post in 1929, from concrete block and a few years later they placed decorative stones on the outer façade.

The older Fields children lived in a house built behind the store, milking the cows, collecting the eggs and dressing the chickens also located on the store premises, while running the store, gas station and small restaurant. The store was located approximately where the Staples parking lot is today.

The younger children helped Mom run the ranch while Dad was working construction and masonry jobs. Myrtle went on to drive the school bus for 27 years. She and her husband Lloyd lived in a house that was located where the Mountain Resource Center is now located. In fact, Kitty Drive is named for Myrtle’s daughter.

Do you have a story to share?
